

Abstract

One aspect of the invention provides a device that non-invasively determines the concentration of a
5 substance in a target. The device includes a first electrode, a measuring circuit, and a data processor. In one embodiment of the device, the first electrode can be electrically insulated from the target, e.g., a cover
10 layer of insulating material covers the first electrode.

TRA 1828716